\\bin\ directory to the \amtlb.dll location. 3. Stop Adobe Media Encoder, Close PremierePro and Restart. I would expect that this to work. In VB6, I had a code sample (available here) that looked like this: Dim p As AMTlib.AudioEncoder Dim a As AMTlib.Stream Set p = New AMTlib.AudioEncoder p.CreateStream(a) 'name the stream, e.g. "encoder" p.SetInputFormat(a, "wav", "au") 'add the input stream to the encoder p.SetOutputFormat(a, "wav", "au") 'add the output stream to the encoder p.SetOutputFile("C:\folder\file.au") p.SetQuality(a, Quality.Normal, 1.0) p.SetLoop(a, Loop.None, 1) p.SetVolume(a, 1.0, 1.0) p.Start() Dim a p.OpenStream(a, "encoder") p.Start(a) p.CloseStream(a) p.Close() If I right-click on the zip file and select "open with" I get the dialogue box that says "Adobe Media Encoder CS6 version 6.0.0.524 cannot be opened because the code has been damaged by malware. Microsoft recommends that you remove the affected code before opening or repairing your file."

Has anyone seen this issue? If so, how do I fix it? A: My guess is that this happens because the file "amtlb.dll" which you deleted was part of a virus. Make sure that the files are safe and that you're not downloading a virus. The motivation to get out of bed in the morning is a critical factor that determines the success or failure of a day. And if it's not happening, you might be falling asleep in the middle of the day. It's called the circadian misalignment, the process of not working the morning hours efficiently, and it means that you're not getting enough sleep.
